

New Clever Bank Phishing Scam Is Duping Even The Experts

This is something that we keep reminding our dear readers — you always need to be informed about the latest scam. From email schemes to spam to robocalls, it's important to keep abreast of emerging ploys and be a step ahead.

That's because criminals are counting on us to overlook details and fall for their tricks. It just takes one mistake to have your entire bank account drained or your identity stolen.

Crooks are getting sophisticated and they are polishing their techniques constantly, waiting for the perfect moment to pounce.

Which is why we at Komando.com do our best to keep you up to date on all the attacks making the rounds. And you won't believe the latest phone phishing scam that's going around. It's so clever that it's even fooling tech experts everywhere.

New phone phishing scam you need to watch out for

There are tons of robocall scams going on at any given time. Some are so laughably obvious and easy to spot that you can see them from a mile away. However, occasionally comes a clever scam that's so elaborate and professionally handled that even some of the smartest people could fall for it.

The new phone scam that's rapidly spreading is one prime example - it's so convincing that it's even fooling tech experts! Read on and we'll tell you all about the details of this scheme so you won't be the next victim. Kim Komando, excerpt posted on SouthFloridaReporter.com, Oct. 5, 2018

Main image courtesy of “Kim Komando Show”